Re: Your deposition
Retzlaff v. Van Dyke,
431st District Court of Denton County
Case # 20-2579-431

McGibney,

As provided by Texas Rules of Civil Procedure 199.2(b)(5) and 205.1(c), I got a deposition subpoena with your name on it! I just need to know whether or not you are going to play games, again, with the process servers and constables or if you will simply agree to accept your subpoena like a man?

The voluntary acceptance of the subpoena will not prevent you from filing a motion to quash. It just saves time and hassle.

Attached is a list of things that I will want you to produce for your deposition so we can have something to talk about. Such as this social media post by you:

I would like to know what it means for you to be a “central repository for evidence collection” and I am deeply curious to see whether or not this Walker Wicevich guy is willing to sign a Declaration saying that he authorized you to receive child pornography and to share links with child pornography websites with others (such as your “hard hittin’ crew” whom you so often times brag about). Back when you had that @Bullyville twitter account, you would often times Tweet about how people were sending you child porn or links to child porn websites and about your “work” for the FBI.

As evidence by the above Tweet, you seem to like to refer a lot of people to the FBI for investigation and you brag about your association with them. Besides myself (of course), I am curious to find out how many others on your enemies list that you have referred to the FBI for investigation.

In any event, I need to know whether or not you are going to dick around with this or if you will simply accept the subpoena. Keep in mind that I will be suing you for all the monies I have had to spend on those process servers for the three weeks you spent evading them and playing games. Under the law, I am absolutely entitled to compensation.

I need your answer ASAP.

Respectfully,

A handwritten signature in black ink that appears to read "Tom".
